TALLAHASSEE, Fla., July 22.—A wife has the right to be alone with a man friend on a public highway without interference from her husband, according to a recent decision of the Florida supreme court.

The case came up through a husband meeting his wife riding alone with another man. He attacked the man, and as a result of the fight that ensued his wife's companion was convicted of assault with intent to murder. The state supreme court reversed the lower tribunal.

"There may have been a time when a wife was regarded as her husband's chattel and being out alone on a public road with another man regarded as sufficient provocation to justify the husband in making an assault upon her companion, but this is no longer true, when women enjoy equal freedom with men," said the opinion read by Chief Justice Brown.

The mere walking or driving of a married woman with another man, or a married man with another woman, is not sufficient provocation to justify an assault by either spouse, and the greater freedom of intercourse between men and women in this day protects them from unwarmed attacks by a jealous husband or wife who sees in innocent acts of social intercourse "confirmations strong as proofs of holy writ" that they are flagrantly immoral."
